Digital History

The UW Department of History is on the cutting edge of historical scholarship. Not only is the department a hub for outstanding teaching and incisive individual research, but the energy and passion of our faculty and students has also found expression in a variety of award-winning projects. These include initiatives for public scholarship and engagement, and innovative digital humanities work. This is history at its most creative and collaborative! Faculty, graduate and undergraduate students in the History Department are also involved in a wide variety of digital history initiatives, touching on diverse thematic, geographic and temporal areas.

Information about these wide-ranging projects, with links to the project websites, are available using the links below.
