Why so few women have run for president of the United States

Submitted by Arts & Sciences Web Team on July 27, 2016 - 10:30am

Bill Radke talks to University of Washington history professor Margaret O'Mara about the historic significance of Hillary Clinton's nomination and why so few women have sought the highest office.